SE's missive announcing Sea Cloud landed poorly with investors - the stock price declined 9% (NASDAQ: -0%) on the news and is now down 37% YTD (NASDAQ: +14%) and has given up all the gains achieved over two quarters of earnings beats. The negative reception is understandable. The open-ended announcement raises questions on the capital requirements to make this a major revenue driver and the returns on capital that SE can derive from Sea Cloud. This is more so given SE's history of aggressively pursuing growth and long investment horizons while the neocloud stocks have been weak recently. We await more details from the SE's results release (or preferably a dedicated event, if SE was to organize one, as owners would like to understand their prospects when their managers are deploying their capital in a potentially new major capex cycle). Separately, we believe an IPO of Monee can result in better disclosure and crystallization of value, while reducing capital requirements on SE. Similarly, improvements in Shopee's margins and cash flow could add to capital flexibility in pursuing cloud investments, in our view.

- Sea Cloud could substantially increase SE's capital requirements. As per SE's 6-K filing, Sea Cloud has been built over the last 2 years with 500 employees. SE's cumulative capex since 1Q24 has been $1.3bn, which has likely covered IT equipment, logistics and fulfilment infrastructure. Assuming $400m of capex currently underpins Sea Cloud and an IRR of 16%, the derived revenue contribution is small compared to the 2026E group revenues of 0.6% (see Table 1). Hence, if it were to become a major fourth business pillar, we believe SE would have to substantially increase the capital investment in Sea Cloud. This could also result in a change in capitalization with part of capex being debt funded (for instance, ISAT's 200MW Zankore platform has reportedly signed a $3bn term loan facility, link). 2% accretion to 2026E group revenues of $32bn, implies capital investment of $1.3bn using the same assumptions in Table 1 (see Table 2). However, the natural question then arises on the value that Sea Cloud will bring to its customers given the rising AI infrastructure investments by hyperscalers (ads from Chinese hyperscalers are amongst the first ads one sees upon landing in Jakarta and Kuala Lumpur) and neoclouds in ASEAN. For instance, CoreWeave has recently announced a 360MW investment in Batam. SE states "Sea Cloud will be an AI-first enterprise platform, built by a team that has spent a decade running infrastructure at enormous scale". However, this could be said of the hyperscalers and some neoclouds too. In our view, one possibility is that Sea Cloud could have a lower cost of capital than Neoclouds due to SE's B/S which could result in price competitiveness. This could be more so if Monese's capital requirements from SE reduce and Shopee is able to generate higher cash flows.
- An IPO of Monee could help crystallize value and reduce capital requirements for SE. In the 6-K, SE states "We believe that Monee is approaching the point where it can stand on its own two feet and begin its own race. Going public could give it the resources and the room to go further and faster than it can today." An IPO of Monee can result in better disclosure and crystallization of value, which is currently nebulous. Hence, this could be value accretive for SE. In addition, a listing could also open up another source of capital for Monee to fund its growth. This has benefitted Shopee's growth while its peers in ASEAN and Taiwan have been private. Moreover, it could reduce the capital requirements on SE. Our back-of-the-envelope calculations show that Monee's cash flows have been up to -US$4.1bn over the last 6 quarters (this estimate is likely overstated as SE has also partly securitized its loan book).

- Margin and cash flow improvement at Shopee could add flexibility in pursuing cloud investments. Given the scale of Shopee, its current margins appear low at 67bps (as of 2Q26) as Shopee has prioritized growth over margins. We have welcomed these investments even though they have resulted in volatility in SE's share price. Our positive view is predicated on an improving customer experience, increased purchase frequency and lowering unit costs. The combination of a large buyer base, merchant network and financial-services platform creates a data advantage that enhances advertising effectiveness, credit underwriting and customer engagement. We have been of the view that a larger ecosystem and increased customer engagement should result in higher profits in the mid-to-long-term. In our view, if the competitive environment allows, SE could look to improve Shopee's margins and cash flows. Possible ways to improve margins include higher commission fees, higher ad revenues, lower unit costs, and optimization of VIP program. In our view, improved cash flows from Shopee would add to SE's capital flexibility in pursuing cloud investments.

Investment Thesis, Valuation and Risks

Sea Ltd (Overweight; Price Target: $173.00)

Investment Thesis
We anticipate SE to deliver strong revenue and earnings growth. Shopee is prioritizing growth. Our calculations show that Shopee possibly has negative working capital and, hence, growth objectives could be supported by relatively low capital from SE. A larger scale enables lower unit costs, a stronger competitive position and better pricing power, and unlocks ad revenues. A larger platform eventually allows for multiple avenues to improve profitability. Moreover, as Shopee and Monee build larger businesses with a larger customer base and deeper customer engagement, SE should be able to generate more data for its AI products and services. However, it is unclear at this stage what AI products and services that SE could pursue. We recommend OW on SE.

Valuation
Our Jun-27 price target of $173 is based on a forward P/E multiple of 25x. Our relative valuation framework is based on companies with large commerce businesses, competitive moats and healthy ROICs. While Shopee has high ROICs and a higher growth outlook than peers, we use a P/E multiple at the lower end of the valuation range due to the higher risk premiums from the competitive environment in its core ecommerce markets.

Risks to Rating and Price Target
Key downside risks to our rating and price target include:

- Adverse macro headwinds, with potential recession in certain countries, could result in lower ecommerce GMV growth and take-rates, and higher credit costs.
- Increase in competitive intensity in ecommerce could result in increase in sales and marketing spending from SE. This presents downside risks to our earnings and valuation for SE.
- Decline in Free Fire without a replacement title.
- Fintech business has seen strong improvement in profitability. If credit quality weakens, it could put our forecasts at risk.
- Meaningful upward revision in interest rates would present headwinds to valuations.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:
J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com.
