Investment Overview

Dominant e-commerce, gaming, and fintech player in Southeast Asia. Sea Ltd. Sea Ltd (SE)'s e-commerce arm Shopee holds the No.1 market position across Southeast Asia. The company is also the market leader in the region's digital lending and gaming businesses.

Shopee is solidifying its 53% regional share as TikTok Shop growth moderates. However, Pinduoduo's cross-border expansion in Southeast Asia (4 markets) alongside Shopee's quick commerce launch and VIP program could weigh on margin expansion.

Gaming and FinTech to see decent growth; Sea Cloud could add losses. Garena's 7% revenue CAGR (FY26F–28F) and Monee's rapid loan expansion anchor growth, but Sea Cloud's expected losses weigh on profitability, dragging down adjusted EBITDA for 3-4 years.

Maintain HOLD with a lower TP of USD85 (previous USD105). Our SOTP valuation values Shopee at 20x FY27F EV/adj EBITDA (a 40% premium to peers) for its superior adj EBITDA CAGR of 44% over FY26F-28, Garena at 8x (a 25% discount to peers) due to slower 5% growth tied to Free Fire, and Monee at 12x (a 20% discount to peers) reflecting rising provisions and Brazil risk exposure. Including USD4.1bn net cash and applying a 10% holding company discount to reflect Sea Cloud losses, our SOTP suggests a fair value of USD94. For our PE based valuation, we lower target PE to 16x (down from 21x) as SE offers FY26F-28F non-GAAP earnings CAGR of 21% (prev 24% CAGR). This yields a blended target price of USD85. 3Q26F capex disclosure and Monee IPO timing are key catalysts.

Key Risks

Our bear case TP is USD67, based on 15x FY27F non-GAAP PE. If Sea Cloud losses were to widen, with an FY27F EBITDA loss of ~USD250mn compared with ~USD190mn in our base case, we project a FY26F-28F non-GAAP EPS CAGR of 15%, (vs base case of 21% CAGR).

WHAT'S NEW

Sea Cloud: the silver lining is years away

Sea Cloud: monetising a decade of in-house infrastructure. Sea Ltd (SE) surprised the market by announcing that it will offer cloud services to enterprises under a new arm, Sea Cloud, positioned as an AI-first platform that competes with AWS and Alibaba Cloud. Founder Forrest Li disclosed the plan in an employee memo on 20th October 2026, marking the ninth anniversary of SE's listing, alongside a planned IPO of Monee. The platform has run Shopee, Garena and Monee for about a decade, and SE has spent the past two years rebuilding it for AI workloads, with ~500 staff involved. Management has given no timeline, capex budget, pricing or revenue target. The stock fell 9.4% on the day, to close near its 52-week low of USD77.05.

We see the strategic logic as sound, but acknowledge the payback is distant and the costs are open-ended. Selling surplus infrastructure capacity to outside customers is a well-trodden path, and SE starts with proven scale, in-house demand and a captive base of Shopee merchants and Monee partners. However, SE enters a market where the global hyperscalers are already committing billions of dollars to Southeast Asian data centres. Building an enterprise sales capability is also new for a consumer-internet company. Alibaba Cloud took about 12 years to post its first adj EBITA profit, in 4Q20. SE's existing infrastructure should shorten that path, but we still expect Sea Cloud to take 3–4 years to reach breakeven. More broadly, Sea Cloud follows the push into quick commerce earlier this year.

A ~4% share of a fast-growing market supports the opportunity, but not near-term earnings. Southeast Asia's public cloud market could grow from ~USD6bn to ~USD30bn by 2030, a ~38% CAGR, according to L.E.K. A 4% share would imply ~USD1.2bn of Sea Cloud revenue by 2030, still below 3% of SE's group revenue. At 3–4x sales, such a business could be worth ~USD6–7 per share in 2030 terms. That value is several years away and comes only after significant investment, so we do not include it in our TP.

We raise our Other Services losses to reflect Sea Cloud start-up costs. We assume Sea Cloud breaks even at the EBITDA level in FY29F and at the operating level in FY30F, faster than Alibaba Cloud's ~12 years given SE's existing infrastructure and in-house demand. On revenue, we assume SE wins a 0.5% share of Southeast Asia's public cloud market in FY27F, rising to 4% by 2030. That is a modest position behind the global hyperscalers and Chinese incumbents, anchored by captive demand from Shopee merchants and Monee partners. Applied to L.E.K.'s market forecast, it implies revenue of ~USD60mn in FY27F, ~USD240mn in FY28F and ~USD1.2bn in FY30F. On costs, we estimate cost of revenue at 30% of revenue, well below the margins mature hyperscalers earn, to reflect SE's smaller scale and its reliance on third-party power and compute in the early years. We base staff costs on the ~500 employees disclosed in the memo circulated by the management on 20th October 2026, growing to ~600 by FY30F at a fully loaded ~USD155k per head, a blend of Singapore and regional engineering salaries, consistent with senior cloud engineering pay in Singapore (Morgan McKinley 2026 Salary Guide: SGD150k–200k for 10–15 years' experience), plus employer contributions and benefits. We also assume SE leases rather than builds data-centre capacity, given the speed-to-market advantage of colocation, which adds USD100–130mn a year of fixed costs. Sales and marketing of USD30mn a year plus 10% of revenue reflects the cost of building an enterprise sales team from scratch, a new capability for a consumer-internet company. Together, these imply EBITDA losses of ~USD190mn in FY27F and ~USD100mn in FY28F, which drive our Other Services revisions. We estimate AI infrastructure capex of USD450mn a year in FY27–28F, easing to USD300mn thereafter, roughly doubles SE's FY25 group capex of USD525mn. Depreciating it over five years, in line with typical useful lives for servers and GPUs, takes the operating loss to ~USD290mn in both years. Cumulative capex of ~USD1.55bn by FY30F and peak cash burn of ~USD1.45bn remain manageable against SE's ~USD4.5bn of FY25 free cash flow. We conservatively assume no tax relief on these losses.

We estimate Sea Cloud to incur incremental EBITDA losses in FY27F/28F before reaching breakeven in FY29F

We cut our TP to USD85 and now value SE on an average of SOTP and PE. In our SOTP approach (i) We value E-commerce business (Shopee) at 20x FY27F EV/adj EBITDA, ~40% above the peer average of 14.5x due to its adj EBITDA CAGR of 44% over FY26F-28F, much higher than its peer average of 10%. (ii) We value SE's Gaming business (Garena) at a FY27F EV/adj EBITDA of 8x at a 25% discount to its peer average of 11x, as we expect Garena's adj EBITDA to growth at lower CAGR of 5% due to its heavy reliance on Free Fire vs peer's 12% over FY26F-28F. (iii) We value SE's Fintech segment (Monee) at 12x FY27F EV/adj EBITDA, at a 20% discount to peer's 15x due to Monee's higher exposure to riskier markets like Brazil (~15-16% of total loans) and rising provisions. We factored in USD4.1bn in net cash. We have also applied a 10% holding company discount to the resulting equity value to reflect uncertainty surrounding Sea Cloud investments and potential cloud losses. We value SE using PE approach as an alternate method and we lower our target PE to 16x (PEG of 0.7x) from previous 21x on FY27F non-GAAP EPS of USD4.79 (previous USD5.09) as SE offers non-GAAP EPS CAGR of 21% over FY26F-28F (prev 24% CAGR). This leads to a PE based fair value of USD77. The average of the two gives our TP of USD85 and we maintain HOLD. Key catalysts are 3Q26 capex disclosure and Monee IPO timing. SE reports 3Q26 results in mid-November, and we look for the first disclosure of Sea Cloud's capex budget, launch markets and loss trajectory. Upside risks include a capex budget below our estimates, early anchor customers, and a Monee IPO valuation that crystallises a premium for the fintech business. Downside risks include higher-than-expected capex, further new ventures, and continued competitive pressure on Shopee from TikTok Shop and Lazada.

Principal Share Price Drivers

GAAP Revenue - Digital Entertainment

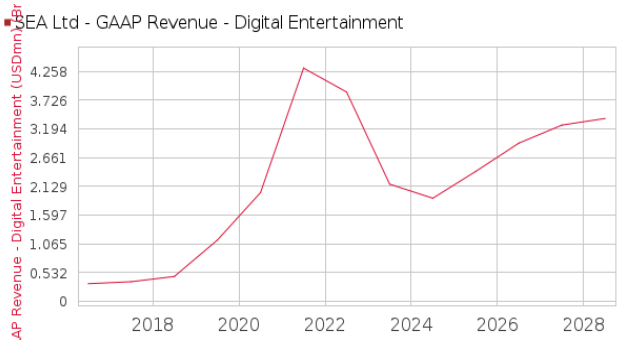

We observe a strong positive correlation of 66% between the y/y growth of SE's share price and Gaming revenue over the last 1-year period.

Sea Ltd's (SE) gaming segment has been a key driver of the group's performance, with revenue stabilising after a period of post-pandemic normalisation. Despite declines in active users, strong monetisation of core titles such as*Free Fire*has helped sustain revenue at healthy levels. Similar to Tencent's reliance on flagship titles to anchor its gaming business, SE's share price will remain sensitive to gaming revenue trends, as we observed a strong positive correlation of 66% between the y/y growth of SE's share price and Gaming revenue over the last 1-year period. We project Sea Ltd's gaming segment to record revenues of USD2.9bn/USD3.3bn in FY26F/27F, supported by steady engagement and potential new title launches.

GAAP Revenue - E-commerce

We observe a strong positive correlation of 76% between the y/y growth of SE's share price and e-commerce revenue over the last 1-year period.

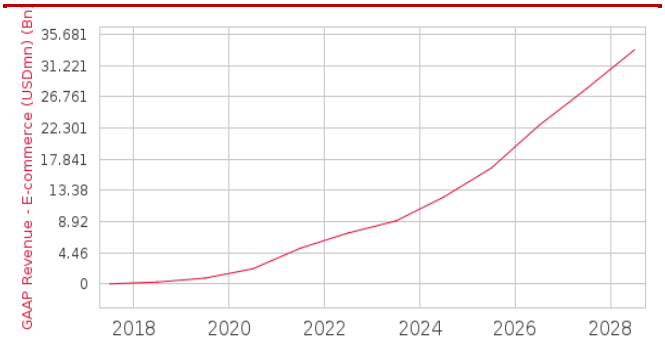

Sea Ltd's (SE) e-commerce segment has established itself as the company's largest growth contributor, with revenue continuing to expand on the back of stronger monetisation and disciplined cost management. The transition from subsidy-driven expansion to a focus on sustainable growth has reinforced the stability of this segment. Notably, we observed a strong positive correlation of 76% between the y/y growth of SE's share price and e-commerce revenue over the last 1-year period, signalling the market's close tracking of this metric. Looking ahead, we expect the e-commerce revenue to remain a key driver of the share price, with projected revenues of USD22.7bn/USD28.0bn in FY26F/27F, supported by deeper penetration in key ASEAN markets and Brazil.

Fintech Loan Book

We observe a positive correlation of 58% between the y/y growth of SE's share price and e-commerce revenue over the last 1-year period.

Sea Ltd's fintech segment continues to scale rapidly, with loan book growth emerging as a key driver of revenue and profitability. The expansion of Monee's credit offerings has been underpinned by disciplined risk management and improving asset quality, resulting in declining NPL ratios over the past few quarters. The market has responded favorably to this trajectory, as we observed a strong positive correlation of 58% between the y/y growth of SE's share price and loan book over the last 1-year period. Going forward, the pace of loan book expansion will be closely watched as a proxy for the sustainability of the fintech segment's growth.

Company Background

Sea Ltd. (Sea)engages in the digital entertainment (DE), ecommerce (EC), and digital financial service (DFS) businesses primarily in seven countries across Greater Southeast Asia.

Business Segments

1)Digital Entertainment.Sea's digital entertainment arm, Garena, primarily focuses on offering mobile and PC online games across the Greater South East Asian region (GSEA) and is one of the leading digital gaming platforms in the region. Garena's first fully self-developed mobile game Free Fire is a popular battle royale game and a significant portion of Garena's revenue comes from Free Fire. Digital entertainment segment accounted for 11% of the total GAAP revenue in FY25.

2)E-commerce.Sea's e-commerce arm, Shopee, is a mobile-centric e-commerce platform and is the market leader in Southeast Asia with a growing presence in Brazil. This segment represented 72% of the total GAAP revenue in FY25.

3) Digital Financial Services.Sea's digital financial services arm, Monee (previously known as SeaMoney), is an e-wallet service targeted at both consumers and small-scale businesses. It has however expanded into lending services supporting the rise in take rate and achieving EBITDA breakeven in 4Q22. The contribution from Monee reached 17% of the total GAAP revenue in FY25.

Balance Sheet

Strong balance sheet with cash and cash equivalents (including restricted cash) exceeding USD10.6bn at the end of FY25.Sea completed an offering of 69m ADSs (American depositary shares) in March 2019, raising US$1.552bn. Increasing free cash flow from gaming is Sea's biggest competitive edge in the e-commerce business as many competitors face funding pressure. Even at the current expansion rate of Sea's EC and DFS segments, we project that the company would not need to carry out any major funding campaigns again over the next 2-3 years.

Environmental, Social, Governance

As a foreign private issuer, Sea has the option to adopt either the corporate governance practices of the New York Stock Exchange or its home country, Cayman Islands. For example, Sea group did not seek the approval of shareholders as required by the NYSE, when amending the equity- based compensation plan in 2018, as a shareholder vote was not necessary under corporate governance practices in the Cayman Islands.

Downgrade Sea Ltd to HOLD with a lower target price of USD105 (previous USD148), based on 21x FY27F non-GAAP P/E, equivalent to a PEG of ~0.8x. We switch from our previous SOTP approach to P/E as SE's earnings visibility has improved, replacing our previous SOTP valuation. Our 0.8x PEG (same PEG for GRAB) is justified by its 24% FY26F–28F non-GAAP EPS CAGR while <1 PEG also captures risks from Shopee's rising investments in quick commerce coupled with limited but rising competition from Pinduoduo in Southeast Asia. We project Shopee's adj EBITDA-to-GMV margins to reach 0.65%/0.76% in FY26F/27F, vs PDD and Alibaba's 1.8%–1.9%, reflecting upside potential in the medium term.
